Synopsis of the CV

I am an observational astrophysicist with broad and multidisciplinary interests spanning supernova science, massive stars, galaxy evolution, and cosmology. I obtained a PhD degree in Physics from Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona (UAB) in Oct 2011, under the supervision of Prof. Ramon Miquel. My first 2-year postdoctoral experience was in CENTRA/IST at Lisboa, under the supervision of Dr. Vallery Stanishev and Prof. Ana Mourão. Then, I got a 3-year Fondecyt postdoctoral fellowship to work with Prof. Mario Hamuy in the Astronomy Department of Universidad de Chile. I am currently a Postdoctoral Associate at University of Pittsburgh, working with Dr. Michael Wood-Vasey. I have always enjoyed scientific independence, conducting competitive research in enjoyable scientific environments, and have proved my potential to reach a position of professional maturity in the following aspects:

- Publication record: I have published 83 original articles in top international peer-reviewed journals, with over 2200 citations (h-index of 25). In 25 out of these 83 papers, I was one of the main contributors, and most of them were published independently from my PhD supervisor. These include the first statistical analysis of Integral Field Spectroscopy of supernova host galaxies from the CALIFA survey, a review article on SN environments, and 13 letters. At the time of writing, 7 articles are under the referee process at various journals.
- Lecturing: I have 2 years experience in lecturing, as an associate professor at the Physics Department of UAB during 2008/09 and 2009/10 seasons, and I have also given tutorials in schools for PhD students (GH2014 in Mexico, and 2ndSELGIFS2016 in Madrid).
- Student tutoring: At an early stage in my career, I have supervised the work of two PhD students (M. E. Moreno-Raya, CIEMAT, Laura Sánchez-Menguiano, U. Granada) in a 3-month visit to Universidad de Chile. This was possible thanks to the funding allocated by the Spanish Ministry of Education on a competitive basis. In addition, during my second postdoc at Universidad de Chile, I had the opportunity to mentor 6 undergraduate, and 1 graduate student in part of my research.
- Organization of scientific events: I have been the responsible of the weekly seminar series at my hosting institutions. I was a LOC member of the International Conference "Supernova through the ages: understanding the past to be prepared for the future" (<http://www.sn2016.cl>), to be held in August 2016 at Easter Island, and the main organizer of a 5-days workshop focused on SN science the week before this conference. In addition, I have been the PI of the proposal that awarded by the LSST Enabling Science call, to organize a SN workshop at U. Pittsburgh in Nov 2016 (20 k$USD), and a workshop on NIR SN Ia cosmology in Nov 2017 (10 k$USD).
- Invitation to deliver seminars and talks: My work is internationally recognized as an expert in the extremely competitive field of SN Cosmology and SN environments. This is demonstrated by the 12 invitations to deliver seminars at several research institutions, and to participate in specialized conferences where the leading trends in his field are discussed, giving 29 talks in total.
- Observational experience: I have been the PI of several observational SN projects at the largest observatories in the world, and lead analyses within major collaborations (PESSTO, CALIFA, DES, AMUSING). Moreover, I have participated in 20 allocated observational campaigns in a competitive basis, at the largest telescopes in the world (Gemini-S, Magellan-LCO, VLT-Paranal, NTT-La Silla, Blanco-CTIO, TNG/GTC-La Palma, 3.5m-CAHA).
